Surrey Six pair found guilty

Ruling. Judge convicts gang members of first-degree murder

Eileen Mohan, whose son was an innocent bystander executed during the Surrey Six murders, speaks to reporters outside B.C. Supreme Court in Vancouver on Thursday. JENNIFER GAUTHIER/FOR METRO

The families and friends of six men found executed in a British Columbia apartment seven years ago erupted into tears and applause on Thursday as a judge declared two men accused of the murders guilty.

B.C. Supreme Court Justice Catherine Wedge found Cody Haevischer and Matthew Johnston each guilty of one count of conspiracy to commit murder and six counts of first-degree murder, following a year-long trial.

"The murders were execution-style shootings," the judge said, reading a summary of her 200-page written decision.

The victims — Corey Lal, his brother Michael, associates Eddie Narong and Ryan Bartolomeo, as well as fireplace repairman Ed Schellenberg and Lal's neighbour Chris Mohan — were found Oct. 19, 2007, face down, shot in the back or the backs of their heads.

Their arms were near or above their heads, Wedge noted. Clothing was put over the faces of three victims found near the fireplace.

"All six were in submissive positions when shot," the judge said.

"The expert forensic evidence indicates the shots were administered carefully and with precision. The deaths were deliberate executions performed while the victims were lying defenceless."

The two accused arrived in court in suits. Haevischer waved at family members seated in the first row of the public gallery behind him and blew a kiss to two little girls among them.

One girl, about three years old, played with flash cards as the judge recounted the grisly details of the crime. The two gang members remained motionless as the judge declared their guilt.

A sentencing hearing will be held at a future date. First-degree murder carries a mandatory minimum sentence of life in prison with no possibility of parole for 25 years.

Johnston and Haevischer, both 30, claimed at trial that the plan was to rob Lal, a drug-dealing rival of their gang, the Red Scorpions, but Wedge found the story "implausible."

"It's a reasonable inference in the items left behind that the plan to rob Mr. Lal was incidental to the plan to kill him," Wedge said. "Had that been the plan, they could simply have abandoned it when they found others in the apartment with him. Instead, they executed six people."

Michael Lal, 26, Bartolomeo, 19, and Narong, 22, were caught in the crossfire. Schellenberg, a 55-year-old father of two, was in the building to service fireplaces and Mohan, a 22-year-old student who lived next door with his mother, were innocent bystanders assassinated to eliminate potential witnesses.

The murders were carried out by Haevischer, Johnston and a fellow gang member who can only be identified as Person X due to a publication ban.

Person X pleaded guilty in April 2009 to three counts of second-degree murder and is serving a life sentence.

A unique residential experience

Onni's Northwest will be one of most sought after spots

CONTRIBUTED

South Cambie Village, off of Marine and Cambie, is in a state of rapid development, driving away the image of an area meant for industry and into one of comfortable living.

Several towers are currently being developed there, as well, and standing out among them is Onni's Northwest, located at on one of the most sought after spots in the entire city of Vancouver.

"Northwest will offer a truly unique residential experience," says Nick Belmar, vice-president of sales for Onni. "Residents can take advantage of proximity to the retail village, the Canada Line, the bike lanes and still come home to a quiet location backing onto a park and elementary school. It's an investment no-brainer for downsizers already living in the area, for investors and for parents who want proximity to good schools and a west side address."

The two-tower, LEED Gold development is comprised of 340 homes, ranging from one-bedroom to three-bedroom designs. It will be next to Ash Park and situated on top of ground-floor retail units.

Inside of Northwest, homeowners can take advantage of several luxurious amenities — a fitness centre, 24-hour concierge, high-efficiency heating and cooling, podium-level roof deck, integrated appliances, wood cabinetry, marble flooring and accents, double-nosed counters, and sleek roller blinds, to name a few. But what makes Northwest stand out is the location. It's far enough from the hustle of the city to feel like a comfortable and quiet community, but close enough to make having a night out an easy choice.

Couple that with the stunning views from the Fraser River to the North Shore Mountains, and Vancouver Island, and it's easy to see why Onni chose this spot to develop.

Northwest will be located at 8175 Cambie St., with homes starting at $269,000.

INTEREST IN SOUTH CAMBIE SKYROCKETING

CONTRIBUTED

Nestled in the heart of Marpole, right on the corner of Marine and Cambie, lies the rapidly growing neighbourhood affectionately called South Cambie Village.

Ever since the completion of the Canada Line in 2009, development in the area has quickly shifted towards comfortable residential living and retail, including condominiums such as Onni's Northwest towers.

This development is one of many new emerging sites in the area, a complement to the Marine Gateway development directly across the road, which will include a pedestrian-friendly outdoor mall and retail hub featuring an 11-theatre Cineplex, an Osaka Supermarket, Starbucks, A&W, TD Canada Trust, CIBC, BMO, liquor store, Subway, Irish pub, and more.

"This area was once almost entirely industrial, but ever since the Canada Line was introduced the livability and interest in the area has skyrocketed," says Onni's Nick Belmar. "Not only will there be these great amenities around these new homes, but this particular location is incredibly unique to Vancouver."

Belmar pointed out how this corner is nine minutes from the airport in one direction and 15 minutes from downtown in the other, offering homeowners a private, comfortable community, while still being close to downtown life — or a plane out of the country.

"Demand has only grown in this area over the past few years, and the value of this real estate is only going to continue to grow," Belmar says.

Off the corner of Marine and Cambie are several bike lanes, including the pedestrian- and bicycle-friendly bridge leading into Richmond just two blocks away.

With SkyTrains, buses, and bicycle lanes leading both into downtown and the surrounding areas, the need for a car is eliminated, Belmar says.

Priority registration is now available online with sales expected to start later this year. For more information and to make sure you are on the list to receive updates as soon as they are released, visit onni.com.

"This area is growing into one of the best spots in the entire city," Belmar says. "It's going to be a wonderful place to live."

EVERYTHING YOU NEED IS CLOSE BY

By 2025, Vancouver plans to be the greenest city in the world, and developments such as Onni's Northwest are giving would-be homeowners the chance to pitch in and be connected everywhere without the need for a car.

"You're connected everywhere, and you don't need to go far to get groceries or have some fun," says Nick Belmar, Onni's vice-president of sales. "Combine that with a growing retail hub and those who live in Northwest can stay connected with the nightlife and excitement of the downtown core, but have the quiet comfort of a close neighbourhood."

Nanaimo's ban on bottled water backfiring: Vendor

Health impact. Concession stand owner says customers at Nanaimo Ice Centre opting for sugary beverages instead

thandi.fletcher@metronews.ca

A ban on bottled water sales at Nanaimo recreation centres is backfiring as many customers are choosing sugary drinks like pop and flavoured water instead, says a concession stand owner.

The City of Nanaimo introduced a ban on the sale of bottled water in city facilities in 2012 in a bid to promote drinking city water and to reduce waste.

But Armil Ramos, owner of Tia Mei's at the Nanaimo Ice Centre, said the ban is having an unintended negative health consequence as many customers who want water are choosing sugar-laden beverages instead.

"They buy pop, they buy Gatorade," he said.

Although the ban has been in place for almost two years, Ramos said he still gets complaints from at least two customers a day about the ban.

To try to meet customer demand for water, Ramos said he now sells flavoured water and Vitamin Water.

"So you can sell water with sugar but you can't sell without it," he said. "It doesn't make sense and I don't know whose idea this was."

The ban has also cost vendors thousands of dollars a year in lost revenue, Ramos said. He estimated that his business lost up to $6,000 a year.

"For a small company like me, it's big," he said.

Tom Hickey, general manager of community services for the City of Nanaimo, said water fountains are clearly marked throughout the city's recreation facilities, along with signs to remind people to bring their own bottles.

"And you can always just use the fountain without a bottle," he said.

A vendor at a Nanaimo recreation centre says the city's ban on bottled water is backfiring as customers are choosing sugary drinks instead. The ban is also costing vendors thousands of dollars a year in lost revenue. JENNIFER GAUTHIER/FOR METRO

At this point, he said council has not directed city staff to look into the bottled water ban.

Meanwhile, in Vancouver, Coun. Tim Stevenson said he wasn't surprised to hear Nanaimo residents and vendors were up in arms over a bottled water ban.

Although Stevenson had similarly campaigned to ban the sale of bottled water in Vancouver parks in 2009, he said he changed his mind after consulting with the park board, as it's a "huge revenue stream" for the city.

"We also don't want people turning to pop, especially young people," he said.

Stevenson said he doesn't expect city council to revisit the issue in the future.

"I think it's pretty well put to bed," he said.

City bans e-cigarettes in areas where smoking is also banned

Battery-powered devices. No longer allowed at beaches, patios and restaurants and can't be sold to minors within city limits

EMILY JACKSON
emily.jackson@metronews.ca

Time to e-butt out, Vancouver.

City council voted late Wednesday night to ban e-cigarettes from everywhere smoking is already prohibited, much to the delight of health organizations and the chagrin of people who have been using the devices freely since their introduction to Canada five years ago.

The battery-powered devices, which vaporize a liquid that is exhaled in a manner that looks like smoking a cigarette, are no longer permitted at beaches, patios and restaurants and cannot be sold to minors within city limits.

While the research on potential health effects of e-cigarettes is far from certain, council thought it was better to err on the side of caution, Coun. Andrea Reimer said Thursday.

"I would agree it certainly does not have the body of research associated with smoking, but that being said, literally hundreds of thousands of lives have been lost racking up that research," Reimer said.

In order to maximize harm reduction, council favoured regulation until research confirms the safety of the products, Reimer said.

She recognizes that some people will be inconvenienced by the new rules, but believes that is outweighed by minimizing the potential risks of second-hand vapour and exposing youth to e-smoking.

Despite the controversy surrounding the decision — a poll of 2,500 Metro readers found 65 per cent opposed the ban — the Canadian Cancer Society is applauding the city's move.

"We see this as a public-health victory," said Kathryn Seely, the society's director of public issues.

The society feared that e-cigarettes, which are marketed as a product that can be used anywhere at any time, would re-normalize smoking and take away years of efforts to make smoking a taboo, Seely said.

Tobacco smoking is still responsible for 85 per cent of lung cancer and 30 per cent of all cancer, she added.

Red Deer, Alta., Innisfil, Ont., and Hantsport, N.S., already have similar bans in place.

In wake of deal

B.C. has made 'no decision' on its portion of Jericho lands

The provincial government says it has no plans for the long-term future of its portion of Vancouver's Jericho lands.

The Government of Canada sold the 21 hectares of federally owned land in Vancouver's Point Grey community on Wednesday to a joint venture between Crown corporation Canada Lands Company and the Musqueam, Squamish and Tsleil-Waututh First Nations for $237 million.

The province owns half of the lands — west of the federal plot — and is currently leasing it to West Point Grey Academy and the Vancouver parks board until 2020.

Minister Andrew Wilkinson has previously said in the legislature that the B.C. government "will observe with detailed interest what happens with the federal lands."

When asked Thursday about the impact of the sale of the federal land, the Ministry of Technology, Innovation and Citizens' Services sent Metro a statement attributed to Wilkinson, saying "no decisions have been made regarding the long-term plans for the Jericho Lands."

"The Province has not entered into any formal talks with First Nations, the City of Vancouver or other stakeholders regarding the provincially owned lands at Jericho."

thandi.fletcher@metronews.ca

Hospitalizations for motorcycle-related injuries have doubled for older male riders in B.C., which could be a sign of an emerging public-health problem, according to new research in the B.C. Medical Journal.

University of B.C. researchers looking at data from 2001 to 2010 found that motorcycle-related hospitalizations for men aged 45 to 74 in B.C. rose from 18.4 to 36 per 100,000 people.

Dr. Mariana Brussoni, lead author and assistant professor in the school of population and public health, said the steady increase was surprising to her team.

"I expected an upward trend but not double," she said.

Researchers found older male motorcyclists were also more likely to suffer internal-organ injuries that required longer hospital stays. Hospitalization costs for these motorcyclists rose by 60 per cent from 2001 to 2010, the study found.

While the researchers didn't look at the reason for the increase, Brussoni speculated that it could be due to older men finding themselves with more spare time, fewer family commitments and more disposable income.

That, combined with age-related issues affecting their reflexes and eyesight, could be a recipe for disaster, she said.

"When something happens, they're going to get more injured and they're going to end up staying in hospital longer than, say, the same injury to a younger person," she said.

Brussoni said the findings suggest a need for an injury-prevention initiative targeting older male motorcycle riders.

Awaiting plebiscite on Nov. 15. City approves $1-billion capital plan

New parks, new childcare spaces and new supportive housing.

These are some of the big-ticket items approved in Vancouver's $1.085-billion capital plan, a road map of how the city will spend money on its facilities and infrastructure from 2015 to 2018.

While the largest single portion ($325 million) will go to utilities, a decidedly boring but essential service, the city approved a large influx on affordable housing and childcare. Voters must approve the planned borrowing levels in a plebiscite on the Nov. 15 ballot.

It intends to create 1,000 new childcare spaces and 2,550 units of social and supportive housing.

It will also build three new parks to deal with growing populations in Yaletown, Marpole and East Fraser Lands.

Major upgrades to the aging Britannia and Marpole-Oakridge community centres are also on the agenda.

Four in 48 hours. Police investigate two separate deaths in Vancouver area

Police in B.C. are investigating two more deaths — making it a total of four cases taken over by the Integrated Homicide Investigation Team (IHIT) in less than 48 hours.

Mounties say one man was found dead around 12:30 a.m. Thursday in a Richmond park, south of Vancouver.

RCMP Insp. Konrad Golbeck says the body was discovered near an elementary school after police responded to reports of gunshots.

Homicide investigators were also called Wednesday night after Mounties in Langley arrested two men in connection to the death of a third.

RCMP Staff Sgt. David Brown says when police arrived at an Aldergrove home, they found three men on the front lawn, one of whom was unresponsive and later died.

IHIT said Wednesday morning it is also investigating two other deaths, one on the Sunshine Coast and another that occurred in Maple Ridge a day earlier. THE CANADIAN PRESS

NPA, Vision talk trash over incinerator

Dirty bickering.
LaPointe calls plan 'an attack on Vancouver'

EMILY JACKSON
emily.jackson@metronews.ca

Non-Partisan Association mayoral candidate Kirk LaPointe is trash talking political rival Vision Vancouver for apparently doing nothing to stop the building of a new garbage incinerator in Metro Vancouver.

"(Mayor Gregor Robertson's) plan to build an incinerator without community consultation, without transparency and without actual proven technology is an attack on Vancouver," LaPointe said at a news conference Thursday.

All in agreement?

"It's great that (the NPA) now also seems to share that position."
Coun. Andrea Reimer

But the fact is the mayor and Vision Vancouver are staunchly opposed to an incinerator and have made that position very clear to Metro Vancouver, the organization that will decide sometime in 2015 how and where to deal with the region's garbage.

"We are completely opposed to incineration," Coun. Andrea Reimer said Thursday, adding it's "frustrating" that the NPA hasn't come out with any new policies.

'Less than the rest of us.' Clark takes a jab at feds on foreign worker rules

British Columbia Premier Christy Clark has accused federal politicians of "tragically misdirected" policies over the issue of temporary foreign workers, as she pushes for the thousands of skilled labourers needed for her envisioned liquefied natural gas industry.

Clark took a bold stand in a speech to the province's business community Thursday, just ahead of her government's return to the legislature and planned introduction of new LNG laws.

She told the Vancouver Board of Trade luncheon that as federal election campaigning unfolds, leaders in Ottawa must stop playing politics over the controversial program.

"We should not think about people who come from across the world to British Columbia to work as being something less than the rest of us," she said, after laying out her Liberal government's priorities.

"So my advice to federal politicians is this: If you want to fix the temporary foreign workers program, maybe they should start with changing the name.

"Call them 'potential new Canadians,' because they're coming here to help us build our country."

The premier added her voice to other critics of the federal government's program overhaul, arguing new rules are too onerous for provinces facing genuine labour shortages.

In June, Federal Employment Minister Jason Kenney laid out plans to limit how many foreign workers can be hired by large- and medium-sized companies. Kenney also included tougher penalties for companies found in violation of the rules and ordered inspections to deter abuses.

Alberta Premier Jim Prentice said last week that labour policy will top his agenda when he gets his first meeting with Prime Minister Stephen Harper.

The B.C. Liberals also want to mitigate an expected dearth of labour, which will only grow larger if their LNG plans are successful. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hong Kong's leader won't resign, but is willing to talk

Call for Leung to step down. Police warn of serious consequences if protesters move to occupy gov't buildings

Hong Kong's embattled leader refused demands by pro-democracy protesters to resign Thursday, and instead offered talks to defuse a week of massive demonstrations that have grown into the biggest challenge to Beijing's authority since China took control of the former British colony in 1997.

The Hong Kong Federation of Students said in a statement early Friday that it planned to join the talks with the government, focused specifically on political reforms. The federation reiterated demands that Chief Executive Leung Chun-ying step down, saying he "had lost his integrity."

A wider pro-democracy group that had joined the demonstrations, Occupy Central, welcomed the talks and also insisted that Leung quit.

Occupy Central "hopes the talks can provide a turning point in the current political stalemate," it said in a statement. "However, we reiterate our view that Chief Executive Leung Chun-ying is the one responsible for the stalemate, and that he must step down."

Leung's comments came at a news conference held just minutes before the protesters' midnight deadline for him to quit.

"I will not resign," he said.

The students had threatened to surround or occupy government buildings if Leung did not step down, and the police had warned of serious consequences if the protesters carried out that threat.

Apps for spying?

The Chinese government might be using smartphone apps to spy on pro-democracy protesters in Hong Kong, a U.S. security firm said.

- The applications are disguised as tools created by activists, said the firm, Lacoon Mobile Security. It said that once downloaded, they give an outsider access to the phone's address book, call logs and more.

FireChat

Digital tools become gear for protesters

Just as protesters in Egypt depended on Twitter three years ago, the latest digital tools have become required gear for tens of thousands of people demanding democratic reforms on the streets of Hong Kong.

Many of the demonstrators are glued to the smartphone app FireChat, which lets them communicate even if cellphone networks jam or go down. The protesters just have to turn on their Bluetooth connections within 70 metres of anyone else using the app to see the messages sent by the entire chat group, creating a daisy-chain effect.

Cellphone networks and websites continue to work normally in Hong Kong, although protesters ran into slow network connections this week when trying to use their devices at the same time.

FireChat was reportedly downloaded 100,000 times by users in Hong Kong in just 24 hours earlier this week. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Steroid bust

Alberta police arrest four, seize $9.3M in drugs

Four people have been arrested in what the police say is a record seizure of illegal steroids in Canada.

Alberta Law Enforcement Response Team spokesman Mike Tucker says the four were arrested following searches of three homes and two storage lockers in Edmonton last month.

One of the homes had a full-blown, industrial steroids manufacturing laboratory and was just metres away from an elementary school.

The value of the materials is pegged at $9.3 million. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ricin-like toxin

U.K. woman convicted of buying poison

A London jury on Thursday convicted a British woman of buying poison over the Internet but cleared her of trying to kill her mother in a plot that prosecutors said was inspired by the TV show Breaking Bad.

Kuntal Patel was acquitted of attempted murder at London's Southwark Crown Court. She had been accused of slipping a ricin-like toxin into her mother Meena's cola after she was forbidden from marrying.

Prosecutors said Patel concocted the murder plot after watching an episode of Breaking Bad.

Police say almost all killed on volcano died of injuries inflicted by flying rocks

Doctors have determined that almost all of the dozens of people killed on a Japanese volcano died of injuries from being hit by rocks that flew out during its eruption, police said Thursday.

Rescuers have retrieved 47 bodies from the ash-covered summit area of Mount Ontake since Saturday's eruption.

Doctors concluded that all but one of the bodies showed signs of having been hit by volcanic boulders and rocks, Nagano prefectural police said. The other victim died of burns from inhaling hot air.

Those hit by the rocks and debris had multiple cuts and fractures, particularly in the head and the back, as well as the legs, a prefectural police official said on condition of anonymity, citing department policy. Nagano police had earlier said the victims died of "disaster," without specifying the cause.

Most of the bodies were found near Mount Ontake's summit, where many climbers were resting or having lunch. Some bodies were retrieved from a trail at a slightly lower elevation.

Experts say hikers near the summit might have been hit by rocks flying as fast as 300 kilometres per hour. Most of the ash fell in the first hour of the explosion, according to the University of Tokyo's Earthquake Research Institute.

Survivors said they fled for their lives as rocks and debris rained down on them while they struggled with hot air and ash hitting their face.

Medical experts who have examined some of the nearly 70 injured have said most had bruises, cuts and bone fractures on their back, an apparent sign they were hit by rocks flying out of the volcano. Some of the injured reportedly had damage to their lungs and other organs due to the impact of rocks hitting them. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Justify combat role: Trudeau to Harper

War in Iraq. Previous prime ministers have built non-partisan cases for war, but not Harper, says the Liberal leader

Liberal Leader Justin Trudeau following a Canada2020 event in Ottawa on Thursday. SEAN KILPATRICK/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Prime Minister Stephen Harper is playing political games with the lives of Canadian soldiers as he prepares to send them to war against Islamic extremists in Iraq, Justin Trudeau charged Thursday.

The Liberal leader said Harper has made no attempt to justify a combat mission or to foster an all-party consensus on the issue.

Indeed, Trudeau said the prime minister seems to relish casting himself as the lone tough guy among federal leaders.

"Unlike prime ministers for decades before him, Mr. Harper has made no effort to build a non-partisan case for war," Trudeau told a conference hosted by Canada2020, a progressive think-tank.

"Instead, he dares us to oppose his war, staking out not moral territory, but political territory."

Trudeau said he hasn't yet decided whether Liberals will support a combat mission, but made it clear his inclination is to have Canada stick to a non-combat role in the U.S.-led fight against the militant Islamic State of Iraq and al-Sham (ISIS) group.

"Why aren't we talking more about the kind of humanitarian aid that Canada can and must be engaged in, rather than trying to whip out our CF-18s and show them how big they are? It just doesn't work like that in Canada."

Harper is expected to announce Friday that Canada will deploy CF-18 fighter jets to take part in airstrikes against the militants in Iraq.

Conservatives struck back at Trudeau's comments.

"Our involvement in the fight against (ISIS) is, and has been, motivated by a desire to do our part in fighting a group that has made direct terrorist threats against Canada and Canadians, in addition to carrying out atrocities … in the region." said Jason MacDonald, the prime minister's spokesman.

The Liberals supported the decision to send a small number of forces into Iraq for 30 days to help in training.

But whether that support will extend to combat is doubtful.

Ohio woman sues clinic over sperm donor error

'How could they make a mistake?' Chicago-area sperm bank inseminated lesbian couple with a sample from the wrong man: Lawsuit

COURTESY OF JENNIFER CRAMBLETT/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A woman has sued a Chicago-area sperm bank after she became pregnant with sperm donated by a black man instead of a white man as she and her partner had intended.

Within days of her marriage to Amanda Zinkon in New York, Jennifer Cramblett became pregnant with the donor sperm.

However in April 2012 when Cramblett — then five months pregnant — called Midwest Sperm Bank LLC near Chicago to reserve the same sperm for Zinkon in hopes she, too, would one day also have a child, she was told by an employee, according to a lawsuit filed Monday, that she had been inseminated with sperm from the wrong donor.

"How could they make a mistake that was so personal?" Cramblett said during a telephone interview on Wednesday.

According to the lawsuit, her excitement about the pending birth was replaced with anger, disappointment and fear.

"They took a personal choice, a personal decision and took it on themselves to make that choice for us out of pure negligence," Cramblett said.

A woman who answered the phone at Midwest Sperm Bank declined to comment and said an attorney would provide an official statement.

Cramblett said her reason for filing the suit — which seeks a minumum of $50,000 in damages — is to ensure it doesn't happen to another couple. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Liberia says U.S. Ebola patient lied

Thomas Eric Duncan.
Man travelled from Liberia to Dallas to visit relatives and fell ill on Sept. 24

Liberia plans to prosecute the airline passenger who brought Ebola into the U.S., alleging that he lied on a health questionnaire about not having any contact with an infected person, authorities said Thursday.

Neighbours in the Liberian capital of Monrovia believe Thomas Eric Duncan become infected when he helped bundle a sick pregnant neighbour into a taxi a few weeks ago and set off with her to find treatment.

The 19-year-old pregnant woman was convulsing and complaining of stomach pain, but everyone thought her problems were related to her pregnancy. She died, and in the following weeks, all of those who helped her got sick or died, neighbours said.

Duncan left Liberia on Sept. 19, flying from Brussels to Dulles airport near Washington. He then boarded a flight for Dallas-Fort Worth, and arrived the next day. He started feeling ill four or five days later. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

How it spreads

Ebola is introduced into the human population through close contact with the blood, secretions, organs or other bodily fluids of infected animals. It then spreads through human-to-human transmission via direct contact (through broken skin or mucous membranes) with the blood, secretions, organs or other bodily fluids of infected people, and with surfaces and materials (such as bedding and clothing) contaminated with these fluids.

Awaiting test results

Patient in Toronto may have Ebola

A patient in Toronto is being tested for Ebola, but a hospital official says it's very unlikely the person has the virus.

A spokeswoman for the University Health Network says the patient had a fever and a travel history from West Africa. Gillian Howard says the test has been ordered as a precaution. She says the patient is in isolation and the health workers are using protective gear until the test results have returned from the National Microbiology Lab in Winnipeg.

Harper. Federal deficit now to be $5.2B

Prime Minister Stephen Harper says last year's federal deficit will be more than $10 billion smaller than forecast, but he's refusing to predict the rapidly improving bottom line will mean balanced books this fiscal year.

Harper dropped the new, $5.2 billion deficit figure for 2013-14 — down from the $16.6 billion shortfall projected in last February's federal budget — during a presentation to a business audience Thursday in Brampton, Ont.

But the good fiscal news didn't make it into a news release from the Prime Minister's Office, and Harper insisted there won't be a surplus until the 2015-16 election year.

"The government has no plan or no intention to move this year into a surplus," Harper said.

"We continue to intend to run a small deficit this year before returning to surplus."

Was A&F 'look policy' discriminatory? Top U.S. court will decide

Abercrombie & Fitch.
U.S. Supreme Court to decide if Muslim woman denied a job due to her headscarf was discriminated against

The U.S. Supreme Court said Thursday it will consider whether retailer Abercrombie & Fitch discriminated against a Muslim woman who was denied a job because her headscarf conflicted with the company's dress code, which the clothing chain has since changed.

The justices agreed to hear the Obama administration's appeal of a lower court decision that ruled the New Albany, Ohio-based company did not discriminate because the job applicant did not specifically say she needed a religious accommodation.

At issue is how employers must deal with laws that require them to make allowances for a worker's religious practices, as long as doing so does not cause the business too much hardship.

A federal judge initially sided with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, which sued on behalf of Samantha Elauf. The agency alleged Elauf wasn't hired at a Tulsa, Okla., store because her hijab violated Abercrombie's "look policy," described at the time as a "classic East Coast collegiate style."

But the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed that decision. The appeals court said Elauf never directly informed her interviewer she needed a religious accommodation, even though she was wearing the headscarf during her interview.

1 Where's the beef? Wednesday kicked off Vegetarian Awareness Month. The North American Vegetarian Society wants to educate us about the benefits of a meat-free diet, and I want to learn, but I am repeatedly distracted by the unusually short lines at Burger King.

2 Off-duty. German labour minister Andrea Nahles commissioned a study of work-related tension following a union-proposed anti-stress act. The law would forbid employers from contacting workers after hours, including via email or text. Results of the study could expedite the motion and break new ground in work-life balance. At the very least, it will mean a marked improvement for those who hate their jobs.

3 Puck Stop. NHL hockey is back with epic national rivalries: Edmonton jawing at Winnipeg fans, Calgarians scoffing at Vancouver followers, and Montreal and Toronto fans exchanging words in two languages, while spouses of hockey buffs exchange no words at all.

4 Praise Potter. Christian mommy blogger Grace Ann has rewritten Harry Potter, saying she's happy her kids are reading, but she doesn't want them "turning into witches!" Now, we're obviously all concerned with the growing threat of kids turning into witches, so I support her Hogwarts School of Prayer and Miracles book. It's time we taught our children not to believe in magic, rather to put their faith in ... miracles?

5 Last impression. Larry Frazer's funeral was cancelled by a volunteer at St. Patrick Church in Saskatoon, who disliked the obit photo showing the deceased wearing a Sons of Anarchy T-shirt and a mohawk. Daughter Cheryl Stinson suspects the volunteer thought Larry was a gang member, saying they "do not want his kind here." The church later apologized and said, "If we were paying him, we'd fire him."

6 Spoiler alert. NBC's Blacklist is back for Season 2 with a familiar name appearing as one of Reddington's many frenemies. Paul Reubens, a.k.a. Pee-wee Herman, will play Mr. Vargas. James Spader's Reddington character will retain his trademark guile and clever misdirection, only in this case ambiguous insults will be met with "Nah-nuh-nah-nuh, I know you are but what am I?"

7 A la mode. Karl Lagerfeld ignited social media portals by re-creating Paris boulevard for Chanel's extravagant show at Paris fashion week. The pageantry culminated with all the models marching out, picketing in a mock feminist protest. Because let's face it: Nothing screams feminism louder than 50 model-waifs with body-image issues in outrageously priced couture.

8 Listen up. Spotify, the largest global streaming music service, finally launched in Canada, and has aligned itself with most of our national labels to provide a comprehensive catalogue of Anglo- and Franco-Canadian music. Ahead of the curve when the industry was battling illegal downloading, these guys just said, "Why own when you can rent?" and simply provided the platform that offers subscribers access to more than 20 million songs any time, anywhere. But then, what do I know? I'm still trying to burn my records onto CDs.

Circus show inspired by Metropolis, Kafka

It's a life that has for generations symbolized freedom, release from the humdrum of the everyday, the strictures of expectation.

Unlike most people, though, running away to join the circus is a reality for the performers in French-Canadian dance company Cirque Eloize.

Their new show Cirkopolis, on now at the Sydney Opera House, deploys circus and dance to tell the story of an office worker stuck in a grey existence who begins to explore the city around him in very physical ways.

"It's a metaphor, the idea of placing the main character at the beginning just working in his office — but then, throughout the entire show, contaminating his environment with his poetry, showing how ways of interacting and smiling at people can change an entire reality," explains Cirque Eloize artistic director Jeannot Painchaud, who is also the show's creator. Metaphor

The circus arts, the show's creator believes, are the perfect disciplines to explore questions of individuality and self-expression.

Eerily quiet but horrifying

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Don't want to sleep tonight? Scan this photo with your Metro News app to see the creepy, haunting trailer for Annabelle. If you dare. CONTRIBUTED

Synopsis

This prequel to The Conjuring proves you can't keep a good doll down. It tells the story of Annabelle, that movie's creepy, possessed doll, before she was safely locked away. The story begins in the late 1960s with a gift from John (Ward Horton) to his expectant wife Mia (Annabelle Wallis). He buys her Annabelle, a seemingly harmless vintage doll, decked out in a lace wedding dress. Their quiet peace is broken by a home invasion, and although they survive, strange things start happening in the wake of the attack and it looks like Annabelle has something to do with it.

- Richard: ●●●○○
- Mark: ●●●○○

Annabelle. The creepy doll is back, but it's the everyday sounds and objects that are the most frightening in this prequel to The Conjuring

Richard: Mark, Annabelle is like a haunted-house attraction at Halloween. There's nothing truly soul-scorchingly scary inside, but it will give you a few good jolts.

It's part psychological drama, part paranormal activity and is filled with good weird atmosphere, but where The Conjuring had the benefit of two strong leads in Vera Farmiga and Patrick Wilson, Annabelle's stars, Wallis and Horton, aren't very compelling.

She put me in the mind of Sharon Tate, which is appropriate for the time and story, and Horton reminded me of … nothing much at all. More interesting leads might have made me care more about the story.

Were you scared?

Mark: Yes I was, Richard, more from the expert filmmaking than what the actors brought to the picture.

The director uses a lot of unusual camera angles and unexpected cuts to raise the suspense. And unlike so many horror movies that take place in dark, decrepit mansions, this one is bathed in light and uses a lot of California pastels.

The story is familiar, but the look of the movie kept me off-balance.

But it owes a big debt to Rosemary's Baby, which you hinted at in referencing Tate, who was married to Roman Polanski. Horton looks a lot like John Cassavetes, the plot involves children and satanic cults, and the couple lives in a penthouse. Do I make a decent case?

RC: It definitely has echoes of Rosemary's Baby and I'd add in a taste of Repulsion in there as well.

The actors may be milquetoasty, but the movie's low-key eerie atmosphere isn't. Director John R. Leonetti amps up the tension but without the use of computer-generated special effects. Instead he relies on silence and everyday sounds to make your skin crawl.

The self-operating sewing machine from Hell and Satan's popcorn are effectively used in a movie that may be the quietest horror film ever made.

MB: Yes, the movie is very good at making inanimate objects spooky.

I also never thought of Cherish by The Association as being a scary song, but it's just another example of how Leonetti twists conventions in this otherwise conventional movie.

The part of the film that least impressed me was Annabelle herself. Not to malign the doll, but she's no Bride of Chucky.

RC: She's no Barbie either! She's simply the prop that will allow producers to string together a series of prequels and sequels based on devil doll lore.

Possessed or not, I'm guessing she works cheaper than the human actors.

MB: Wait! Barbie as devil doll! Talk about rebranding! Let's get the pitch ready...

Sheen armed to teeth for dental appointment gone wrong

Nobody likes going to the dentist, but this is ridiculous. Charlie Sheen is reportedly being investigated for claims of assault with a deadly weapon after a dental appointment went awry, according to Radar Online.

Sheen brought his own dentist along with him for a procedure on an abscess but apparently had a change of heart about the man, as the Anger Management star supposedly pulled a knife on him.

He also lashed out at a female dental technician when she tried to administer nitrous oxide, which just doesn't sound like Sheen at all.

Sheen's bodyguard reportedly informed the dentist that the actor had been under the influence of an illicit substance at the time of the incident.

You know, the usual.

Charlize takes diva rep out for another spin

NED EHRBAR
Metro in Hollywood

Maybe Charlize Theron should just stick to using a personal trainer. After making headlines this summer for diva behaviour at a SoulCycle spin class, including being rude to Tia Mowry, the Oscar-winner has reportedly moved to a new workout location — but her attitude hasn't changed.

"She always arrives late to class with a scowl on her face and has the nerve to ask people who are already settled on their bikes to switch," a spin classmate at West Hollywood's Crunch gym tells In Touch of Theron. "She always causes a scene. People know to steer clear of her."

Again, why is someone of Theron's stature and fame even taking classes like this if they cause her such clear displeasure? Isn't the whole point of being rich and famous that you don't have to mix with the normals?

A KISS FOR A CAUSE

Kisses raise funds for The Lipstick Project

We all know kissing is fun, but did you know you can do it for a good cause?

At Metropolis at Metrotown from Oct. 8-13, mall visitors are invited to donate their kisses for the A Kiss for a Cause initiative.

All you have to do is plant a kiss on a postcard and add it to the Kiss Wall in the Atrium Court.

For each kiss that guests apply to the Kiss Wall, Metropolis will donate $1 to The Lipstick Project, a Vancouver-based charitable society that offers compassionate care through free, professional spa services for individuals across Canada who are facing significant health challenges.

There is no charge to participate — just a kiss.

"The Lipstick Project brings the gifts of human touch, care and fun to the people who need that most," says Judy Black, marketing director of Metropolis at Metrotown. "We're proud to be partnering with them and we hope our guests will help us spread the word."

The Kiss Wall is going digital too: participate in Metropolis at Metrotown's A Kiss for a Cause Instagram and Twitter contest. Take a selfie to show off that perfect pout and share it on social media by tagging #aKissforaCause and @MetropolisatMet.

"Even if you can't physically stick your kiss on the Kiss Wall, you can participate online via Instagram and Twitter," explains Black. "It's a really fun project."

GET YOUR GLAMOUR SHOT

For a limited time on October 11, 12 and 13, Metropolis at Metrotown will be offering guests professional black-and-white glamour portraits for a suggested donation of $5 each.

Come get your lipstick done by a makeup expert, your photo taken by a professional photographer from The Collective You and take home a beautiful shot for a good cause.

All proceeds will go to The Lipstick Project. Spots go fast. Visit A Kiss for a Cause in Atrium Court to pre-book your glamour shot.

SHUTTERSTOCK

For every "kiss" added to Instagram, Metropolis will donate $1 to The Lipstick Project. Plus, every contestant will be entered for a chance to win a Metropolis gift card.

"We really value and work with a lot of community initiatives at Metropolis," says Black. "It's important to us, to our store tenants and to our guests to give back locally."

A KISS FOR A CAUSE

October 8 – 13, 2014

Share your perfect pout on our kiss wall in Atrium Court.
For every kiss added Metropolis will donate $1 to The Lipstick Project.

Give us a kiss on Instagram or Twitter. Share a kiss at #aKissForaCause

FALL FUN
WEEKEND, October 3-5, 2014

Make it an autumn for everyone

Have some fun this season. Take advantage of the mild weather and cross these activities off your list

Visiting a pumpkin patch is an excursion the entire family can enjoy. SHUTTERSTOCK

JAY MENARD
For Metro

While most Canadians have a love/hate relationship with winter, fall is known for its vibrancy and beauty. But for those who see the falling leaves and changing colours as a prelude to the cold to come, here are some ways to ward off the winter blues, before they have even hit.

"While it's great to go to a gym or play hockey, we have a country filled with beautiful natural resources to enjoy," said Katherine Janson, the director of communications and public affairs for ParticipACTION, a non-profit organization that promotes physical activity. "Go for a hike, go for a walk with family — it all counts as activity and it's a great opportunity to take advantage of the great outdoors."

Take in the scenery: Across most regions of Canada, the fall season changes the Great White North, temporarily, into a picturesque landscape of oranges, reds, and yellows, as leaves turn and fall. Whether you go for a drive in the country, or wander through your neighbourhood picking richly coloured leaves to press, these are ways to unite with nature.

Visit the fair: For communities large and small, fall is a time where harvest fairs gear up. Some offer midway rides, others focus on food and dancing. Whatever the case, it's a wonderful way to enjoy the bounty of the season with friends, family and the community, at large.

Farm fun: In some parts of the country, corn mazes are all the rage, in other areas, pumpkin patches abound. And don't forget about the apple picking.

Spook yourself: The fall season is when ghosts and ghouls come out to play. Haunted houses, creepy community strolls, and other spooky spectacles take over towns and cities leading up to Halloween.

'Leaf' your worries behind: Sure, those leaves are falling, but that doesn't mean you have to stop enjoying them. Many of us fondly remember the joy of jumping into a freshly raked pile of leaves, so why stop now? Ditch the rake for a few minutes and take a leap in with, or without, the kids.

Pumpkin spice, everything: It's generational and ubiquitous. Coffees, teas, muffins, doughnuts, pies ... the scents of the season are fully baked or seeped in for your taste buds. Wherever you are, whatever you enjoy, there is sure to be something that will help you fall in love with fall.

What to do in Vancouver

- Stanley Park: Enjoy the majesty of Vancouver's fall beauty in its most iconic park. Bus and horse-drawn carriage tours available.
- VanDusen Botanical Garden: Enjoy the changing fall colours, including the beautiful, fiery red Japanese maples. Take in the urban wildlife, such as bird watching.
- Maplewood Farm: Cider, pumpkins, animals ... it's a veritable fall wonderland.
- Fright Nights at the Pacific National Exhibition: The PNE is the place for some devilishly good fun from Oct. 10 to Nov. 1., featuring seven haunted houses, 13 rides, the Monsters of Schlock, Kinshira Fire Performers, and more.

Long weekend. Think outside the box

The last long weekend of the year is coming up — a final opportunity to kick back and enjoy an extra day of fun and relaxation between now and the holiday season.

So what can you do to make those three days extra special? Here are a few great ideas from Katie Bugbee, senior managing editor and global parenting expert for Care.com, for last-minute escapes this Thanksgiving weekend:

Head off for one last camping trip: Sure, it may be a little cool, but you can bundle up with extra blankets and a roaring fire. It's a spectacular way to experience fall's colours by day and toast up some marshmallows by moonlight. Enjoy a little nature before the blizzards start.

Take a mini break: With peak travel season over, you can find lots of getaway deals. Whether you decide to rent a cabin, head to a resort in the country, visit the city, or go south, look for one of the great specials you can take advantage of at this time of year.

Plan a shopping extravaganza: The holidays will be here before you know it, so why not head off on a shopping excursion? Whether you boot it across town or across the border, it's a great time to search out some great long-weekend specials — or start brainstorming ideas to tick off the holiday shopping list.

Visit the grandparents: The holidays are still a long way off, and the weather still mild, making it a great weekend for a road trip. And with the grandparents cooing over the kids, mom and dad can spend some much-needed alone time or go on a real date night.

MICHELLE WILLIAMS/FOR METRO

Think transportation

Boats, trains, and automobiles — it's the journey, not the destination.

- Who doesn't love a train trip? Take in the sights and sounds on the rails.
- Take a ferry ride and see fall's colours from the water.
- Hop in the car and drive — without planning where.

Practise gratitude this Thanksgiving

We all know how Thanksgiving is supposed to be — a smiling family around a table loaded with food. Yet the reality can be different. Family squabbles, logistical challenges, or money issues can make holidays more stressful than uplifting.

You have likely read about the power of gratitude to change a person's perspective and increase happiness. But gratitude doesn't just show up on Thanksgiving unannounced. You have to invite it into your home and life. Take a look at how to grow gratitude this Thanksgiving:

Volunteer: Contact a local food bank or centre for the homeless to see how you can help, through donations or volunteering.

Visit someone: Take time to visit someone who is elderly, sick, or lonely.

Strike up a conversation: Instead of ignoring that homeless person, ask them a bit about themselves. Maybe ask their name, and where they hail from.

Compare situations: Learn about parts of the world where kids don't survive into school age, let alone into the age where our teens give us so much trouble. Insights on the topic of child and maternal health are available via charitable websites.

Give back: Donate a bag of clothes to a local shelter, collect canned goods for a food drive, or bake treats for a neighbour. NEWS CANADA

By reaching out and increasing gratitude, you may make a new friend — and that's something for which to be really be grateful. NEWS CANADA

Bake 'em. Dark chocolate mint mason jar cakes

Add just the right amount of country charm to your Thanksgiving with these decadent dark chocolate cakes served in Mason jars. They taste just as good as they look, and can also be offered as festive gifts for your family and friends.

You will need

- 12 half-pint, wide mouth Mason jars
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) butter, for greasing Mason jars
- 1 cup (250 ml) all-purpose flour
- 2/3 cup (170 ml) unsweetened cocoa powder
- 1 tsp (5 ml) baking soda
- ¾ tsp (4 ml) baking powder
- ¼ tsp (1 ml) sea salt
- ½ cup (125 ml) unsalted butter, softened
- 1 cup (250 ml) honey
- 2 large eggs
- 1 ½ tsps (7 ml) pure peppermint and mint extract
- ½ cup (125 ml) plain yogurt
- 1 can, white buttercream cupcake icing
- Cake Mate Décors

1. Preheat oven to 350 F (180 C). Grease Mason jars with 2 tbsp (30 ml) of butter.

2. In a medium bowl, whisk or sift together flour, cocoa powder, baking soda, baking powder and salt, and set aside. In a large bowl or mixer, cream butter and honey together until smooth. Beat in eggs one at a time until smooth, then stir in mint extract.

3. Fold half of the flour mixture in until just combined (do not overmix). Fold in yogurt until combined, then fold in remaining flour. Divide batter evenly into prepared Mason jars, filling each a little more than halfway full. To make filling easy, use a piping bag.

4. Place Mason jars into a roasting pan and fill with hot water, up to 1½-inch (4 cm) below the top of the pan.

5. Bake for 25-30 minutes or until a toothpick inserted in the centre of the cake comes out clean. Using oven mitts or a towel, carefully remove Mason jars from pan and allow to cool completely.

6. Fill Mason jars with icing and decorate as desired with Cake Mate Décors up to 12 hours in advance of serving. To store, ice cakes and seal with lids for up to 48 hours in the refrigerator. NEWS CANADA

Meatballs: The original spaghetti topper

Back to basics. This version of the Italian fave can be made ahead

RICARDO COOKS
Chef Ricardo
Ricardo Magazine

The secret to a successful supper? Just add meatballs!

This version is ultra-tasty and, even better, can be made ahead and stored in the freezer. It is perfect to pull out on an extra-hectic evening.

This recipe serves four. COURTESY RICARDOCUISINE.COM

Meatballs

1. With the rack in the middle position, preheat the oven to 450 F (230 C). Line a baking sheet with aluminum foil. Oil lightly. Set aside.

2. In a large bowl, combine bread crumbs and milk. Set aside.

3. In a saucepan over medium heat, soften the leek, garlic, pepper flakes and fennel in the oil for about 10 minutes. Pour into the bowl with the bread crumb mixture. Let cool. Add the meat and egg and mix thoroughly. Season with salt and pepper. Shape into four large meatballs and place on the prepared baking sheet. Bake for 35 to 40 minutes or until the meatballs are cooked through and golden brown. If needed, finish cooking under the broiler, about 2 or 3 minutes.

Tomato Sauce

1. Meanwhile, in a skillet, brown the garlic in the oil. Add the strained tomatoes. Cook for about 5 minutes or until the sauce thickens. Remove the garlic. Season with salt and pepper. Add the basil and meatballs.

Ingredients

Meatballs
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) Japanese panko bread crumbs
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) milk
- 1 cup (250 ml) finely chopped leek
- 2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
- 1/4 tsp (1 ml) crushed red pepper flakes, or to taste
- 1/4 tsp (1 ml) fennel seeds, ground
- 3 tbsp (45 ml) olive oil
- 1 lb (454 g) ground meat mixture (veal, beef and pork)
- 1 egg, lightly beaten
- Salt and pepper

Tomato Sauce
- 1 clove garlic, lightly crushed
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) olive oil
- 2 1/2 cups (625 ml) strained tomatoes (or canned crushed tomatoes)
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) chopped basil

Spaghetti
- 3/4 lb (375 g) spaghetti
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) grated Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese

Spaghetti

1. In a large pot of salted boiling water, cook the spaghetti al dente. Drain and toss with a little sauce.

2. When ready to serve, divide spaghetti among 4 plates. Make cavity in centre of pasta. Top with large meatball, add remaining sauce, sprinkle with cheese. FOLLOW RICARDO ON SOCIAL MEDIA & ON RICARDOCUISINE.COM OR SUBSCRIBE TO HIS MAGAZINE'S ENGLISH EDITION, WHICH LAUNCHED IN SEPT!

Liquid Assets

Dear modern whiskey lovers

LIQUID ASSETS
Peter Rockwell
@therealwineguy
liquidassets@eastlink.ca

Once the tipple of older men in smoking jackets, whiskey has attracted a much wider audience over the last few years as more countries produce it.

While this modern breed of whiskey lover can be as snobby as his wine counterparts, as a group, whiskey aficionados helped elevate one style in particular to superstar status.

I'm talking American bourbon: a spirit made with at least 51 per cent corn and a favourite of the mint julep-sipping residents of the southern states.

The term bourbon can be used by any American whiskey producer in the U.S. Most don't, allowing the distillers in Kentucky (where it originated) some exclusivity to the name.

It used to be considered a second-tier spirit, but not anymore. Today, releases of rare limited editions are commonplace and selection, especially here in Canada, has never been more vibrant.

Knob Creek Bourbon Whiskey ($44.49 - $49.95) is made in small batches aged for nine years. Deep, robust and oaky, it's best served neat or with a touch of spring water.

PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

Nothing like a trip to old Edmonton

A feisty affair. Sparks fly all over the ice in second-last pre-season outing for Canucks

Alexander Edler had a goal and an assist as the Vancouver Canucks came away with a 2-1 road win over the Edmonton Oilers on Thursday night.

Nick Bonino also scored for the Canucks, who improved to 4-2-0 in pre-season play.

Teddy Purcell responded for the Oilers, who dropped to 4-3-0 in exhibition action.

There was no scoring until there was just 1:19 left in the first period, when Edmonton snagged the lead.

Jesse Joensuu followed up on a two-goal night against Arizona the night before by showing some solid hustle to fight off two defenders in a race to the puck along the boards. Joensuu fed it to Purcell, who scored his first goal as an Oiler since coming over in a trade with Tampa Bay this summer.

Purcell beat Canucks goalie Eddie Lack with a backhand in tight, the first goal Lack has allowed in the pre-season. Lack was shaken up by a collision on the play, but was able to continue in net.

It was a pretty feisty affair with several fights, punctuated by a brief stretch early in the second that saw Cal O'Reilly drag down Edmonton's Nikita Nikitin, forcing him from the game with an ankle injury. Vancouver's Tim Sestito then took a run at Oilers goalie Viktor Fasth, earning the ire of rookie defenceman Darnell Nurse and later a fight with Kevin Westgarth.

Vancouver tied the game 11 minutes into the second period with a short-handed goal as Edler made a long feed to Bonino and he beat Fasth with a quick shot.

The Canucks went up 2-1 with five minutes left in the second while the teams were playing four men a side, as Niklas Jensen fed a wide-open Edler in the slot and he blasted it into the Edmonton net.

There was no scoring in a largely uneventful third period.

The two teams will close out the pre-season with a rematch in Vancouver on Saturday night.

Horvat injured

Canucks prospect Bo Horvat, the ninth-overall pick in the 2013 NHL draft, left Thursday's game and did not return due to an upper body injury.

In his first shift, Horvat was on the receiving end of an open-ice body check in the first period and did not return.

Horvat, 19, entered the game in the running for a potential roster spot on the Canucks. He isn't eligible to be sent down to the AHL.

First CFL start

Antolin has 'that butterfly feeling'

Keola Antolin's first step into football may have seemed sudden. He was around 10 years old, living with his family in Las Vegas.

"One day I woke up, told my dad I wanted to play football," he said Thursday.

Just like that.

His first start in the Canadian Football League seems just as immediate. The sense of urgency, though, is greater, the circumstances dire.

Signed as a free agent in June, and having spent the entire summer on the B.C. Lions practice roster, the 24-year-old Antolin has now become the feature running back for an increasingly wounded team.

Andrew Harris is done for at least the regular season. He underwent surgery this week after suffering a separated left ankle in last Saturday's loss to Calgary.

Stefan Logan wasn't seen during a brief practice Thursday in Surrey, before the Lions departed to Hamilton for Saturday's clash with the Tiger-Cats.

Tim Brown (groin) said he wasn't travelling to Hamilton, but hopes to return to game action next week.

"I got those little jitters like the old-school Pop Warner days, that butterfly feeling," said Antolin.

"That's what I got right now."

The Lions enter this game with a 7-6 record and an offence that's struggled almost all season to put up points.

Antolin isn't expected to see the same type of workload Harris and Logan would get in a game.

"You want to help him out. You want to put him in good situations," said quarterback Kevin Glenn.

"He's just got to be given an opportunity."

Birds run down Motor City Kitties with big 8th

Detroit Tigers relief pitcher Joba Chamberlain leaves the mound in the eighth inning against the Baltimore Orioles during Game 1 of baseball's AL Division Series in Baltimore, Thursday. PATRICK SEMANSKY/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALDS Game 1.

Twelve runs make for post-season Baltimore record

The way Nelson Cruz and the Baltimore Orioles are hitting this season, it may not matter much who pitches for the other guys.

Cruz and J. J. Hardy homered, and the Orioles hammered out 12 hits in defeating Cy Young Award winner Max Scherzer and the Detroit Tigers 12-3 Thursday in the opener of their AL Division Series.

Jonathan Schoop and Alejandro De Aza each had two hits and two RBIs for the Orioles, who turned a close game into a rout with an eight-run eighth inning against Scherzer and three ineffective relievers.

The 12 runs set a post-season record for Baltimore, making its second playoff appearance since 1997.

Game 2 of the best-of-five series is Friday at Camden Yards. Justin Verlander, the second of three straight Cy Young winners the Orioles will face, is set to go against left-hander Wei-Yin Chen.

"I just left too many pitches up," Tigers pitcher Max Scherzer said. "This is a great-hitting ballclub. You give them a chance to extend their arms, they can really hit it. I've got to find a way to get the ball down. I wasn't quite able to do that tonight, and I paid for it."

Vikings pillaged

Julius Peppers returned an interception 49 yards for a touchdown, Aaron Rodgers threw for three scores, and the Green Bay Packers routed the Minnesota Vikings 42-10 on Thursday night.

Eddie Lacy ran for a season-high 105 yards and two touchdowns. Jordy Nelson hauled in a 66-yard touchdown catch and the Packers' defence held Minnesota scoreless for three quarters. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Horoscopes by Sally Brompton

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
A relationship needs sorting out. Be totally honest about your emotions, even if you fear it may hurt someone's feelings. How they react will tell you a lot about your long-term prospects.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
There may be many things in your life that you could change for the better but is it worth it if, in doing so, you have to change habits and routines you feel comfortable with? Only you can decide, but do so quickly.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
What exactly is it that you most desire? Vague feelings won't do. You need to be as specific as you can if you are to have any real hope of making your dream come true. Imagine it, desire it, embrace it, then own it!

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
You will find yourself attracted to an idea that is unusual over the next 24 hours. That's OK. Even people as traditional as you have moments when their minds leap to a higher level.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Don't waste time worrying that what you have to say might make you unpopular. Say it loud and get it over with. You have an important message to convey and personal feelings cannot get in the way.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You'd like to forgive someone who made a mistake but you know if you do they will most likely make the same mistake. This is one of those occasions when you need to act tough.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Yes, you were probably a bit too critical of a partner or colleague, but it's better in this instance to say too much than to not say enough. The fact is they value your judgment, so whatever you said it will have a positive effect.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
The best way to handle a delicate situation is to be brutal. That may sound wrong but the planets indicate you've been pussy-footing round the issue.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
If you have something to say that you suspect won't go down well with certain people, speak up before communications planet Mercury turns retrograde tomorrow. Leave it longer and it won't make sense.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Your feelings about a career matter are spot on, so listen to your instincts. You may be swimming against the tide of opinion but everyone will come round to your way of thinking.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
You have much good fortune in your celestial bank account. When are you going to start spending some of it? The weekend is almost here, so forget about what you have to do and do only what you want.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Say what you mean over the next 24 hours but be careful how you say it. With Mercury starting one of its retrograde phases if others don't like your tone you could make enemies.
